WaterOne wishes to proactively assure its customers that its water remains safe and high quality. With the general anxiety and disruption of the pandemic, misinformation is common and we want to preemptively address concerns. The COVID-19 virus is not known to be a waterborne contaminant, but our robust multi-barrier treatment process is effective at eliminating it as well as other impurities. Now, more than ever, WaterOne is passionate about its mission to protecting public health and serving the public.

WaterOne has been monitoring the emerging COVID-19 situation and its leadership is taking proactive steps to ensure the continued reliability of water services. Our goal is to avoid any disruption to normal water service and minimize disruptions to support resources.

In order to reduce risk of exposure for the safety of WaterOne customers and employees, the WaterOne lobby will be closed until further notice. Assistance for customer accounts and developer services is available by phone or online. All other services, including water service, billing, and emergency repairs and maintenance will continue as normal.

In addition, WaterOne is currently suspending turn-offs for non-pay in support of community wellness. Tap water is vital to promoting and restoring health during the COVID-19 event. This will be reassessed periodically based on the pandemic status and customers will remain responsible for their outstanding balances. If you’re experiencing financial hardship due to the COVID-19 event, please contact us at 913/895-1800 to make payment arrangements.

Spring is here! Don’t Forget To Check Your Sprinklers

Don’t set it and forget it! When you get ready to fire up your lawn’s sprinkler system for the first time this spring, take a moment to double check the settings on your sprinkler controller. Irrigation systems can use a lot of water, and making sure you only water when you want will help prevent any surprises in your water bill as summer approaches.

Help us run our system greener and more efficiently with Smart Watering. By watering on the right days, you can help us use less electricity in water production and maybe even improve pressure in your neighborhood.

Nall Avenue Pump Station Upgrades Underway

Ensuring adequate water supply is a core responsibility at WaterOne. To address customer demand, WaterOne’s Nall Avenue Pump Station at 186th and Nall is getting a big boost in power and capacity.

As part of the Phase II upgrade project, additional internal pumping equipment and electrical gear will be installed inside the existing building, and the station’s capacity will be expanded with an additional 6 million gallon underground reservoir to complement the existing 6 million gallon reservoir already on the site.

The pump station was originally designed to accommodate future expansion. Only underground infrastructure is being added, and when the project is completed, the site will look the same as before. Trees on the property will be protected as much as possible, and any affected landscaping will be restored to the same size and quality.

Construction began in January and is expected to be complete by Spring 2021. Water service will not be affected by the project.
